MARKET FACTS

Sihanoukville set to become Cambodia's top casino hub

Chinese gaming operators are rapidly transforming Cambodia's southern coastal city of Sihanoukville into the country's leading casino hotspot.

Cambodia had issued more than 80 casino licenses by the middle of this year, and Sihanoukville's casino market is starting to rival that of Poipet and Bavet, which cater to customers who stream across the border from Thailand and Vietnam, respectively.

The casino potential of Cambodia, both online and offline

Cambodia has emerged as an area of interest after the Ministry of Economy and Finance, which regulates the gambling industry, dished out ten new casino resort licenses with the majority set to be built in the port town of Sihanoukville.

The new permits will take the total number of licensed gambling operators in Cambodia to 75, with those currently up and running focussing their business on Phnom Penh, the country's capital city. The licences cover around 7,660 slots machines and 2,600 table games across the region with the industry showing signs of growth – in 2013, casino and gambling taxes totalled USD$22m but last year the amount increased to $34m.

Most of the other casinos are located around the towns of Poipet and Pailin, which sit along the border with Thailand, and Bavet, close to the Vietnam border. But the area getting the most attention of late is Sihanoukville, with major plans to turn it into a gambling centre. One developer – Malaysia-based SV International – plans to “bulk acquire every potential development lot” as it looks to turn the town into the “Macau of Southeast Asia”. Investment in hotels and casinos continues to pour into the town, particularly from China.

PROVEN TRACK RECORD

AGE Cambodia has attracted huge quality visitors and government bodies from more than 10 countries such as China, Singapore, Vietnam, Philippines, Taiwan, Korea, UK, US, Malaysia, Africa. It has clinched that the total sales of USD 50 million sales transacted throughout the 3 days event.

Currently AGE Cambodia has rated as The Best Gaming Expo and Conference in South East Asia.
